Part II

1.) For the provided images, this is the mosaic I was able to create.

2.) My first example was of the two pictures below. When I went to combine them, the mosaic came out slightly off. The main problems are the change in illumination and the uneven levels of the image. I think this is largely the result of a slight deviation or movement in the optical center of the camera.
The second set of images I tried were of a more distant, planar image, being the statue of Sam Houston from varying angles. The original two images are pictured below, with the result on the following page.
3.) For the final portion, I decided to place an image of my friend visiting Austin inside of the Colbert Report. The original images are depicted below, with the final result below them and to the left.
