II.

   1.

   Unfortunately, the lighting between images is a bit off, but the resulting mosaic lines up most of the visible edges fairly well.

2.

The front yard of my house; this was two separate images with ideal lighting conditions! It worked out pretty nicely.

This image is a mosaic of three images of my backyard (the first two together had NO visible seam thanks to nearly identical lighting conditions, but the last one was a bit different).

3.

The original image was the kids playing some video game. Now they're playing the "Box with Bob Dylan" video game, apparently.

Extra Credit #3:
The first image is a photo of a wall in the Louvre. I transformed the painting into a fronto-parallel view. The frame and left side of the image got a bit stretched, but I'm not sure why...The given image coordinated were chosen very carefully!
